Public Engagement

The East-West Center connects its resources and research with the local, national, and international community through news media and public information services; briefings for visiting officials; and public programs. In 2011, the EWC conducted more than 25 public programs for Hawai'i audiences.

The East-West Center has enriched the Hawai'i community for three decades through exhibitions, performances, lecture-demonstrations, and hands-on workshops focusing on traditional Asia Pacific arts. In 2011, more than 20,000 students and community members statewide experienced the Center's arts programs, including many youth from economically disadvantaged neighborhoods.
